

Your Document Title

Your Name

2025-11-14

Abstract

For those of you who hear a voice when you read these words, and those of you who can conjure one, – there is a sense in which we might regard the audio you hear to be the result of distributed synthesis

Contents

1 Ecology of Practice	2
Brian Crabtree	2

1 Ecology of Practice

Attempting to define a single “Community of Practice” capable of contextualising this research adequately, elucidated some important aspects about the subject and situation of my research that are in tension with the schema delineated in Wenger’s original (1998), and subsequent (2013) formulations. This chapter will therefore be prefaced by a brief explanation regarding the term Ecology of Practice (Stengers, 2005), and why this term’s capacity to conjure an entanglement of obligations and contexts (plural) might do a better job of clarifying the genealogy of this project’s constituent commitments, than the term “Community of Practice”.

Brian Crabtree

Stengers, I. (2005). Introductory Notes on an Ecology of Practices. Cultural Studies Review, 11(1), 183–196. <https://doi.org/10.5130/csr.v11i1.3459>

Wenger, E. (1998). Communities of practice : Learning, meaning, and identity. Cambridge University Press.

Wenger, E. (2013). Learning in Landscapes of Practice.